China's finance ministry has announced an 84% tariff on goods imported from the US, retaliating against recent levies imposed by the White House.

The hike in tariffs, from 34%, came after US President Donald Trump's 104% tariff on Chinese goods came into force on Wednesday - they were later increased to 125%.

Trump said the 21% rise was "based on the lack of respect" China had shown, and that it would be "effective immediately".

Beijing, which has said its charges would take effect from Thursday, urged other countries to unite against Trump's tariffs as the country's exporters reel from the crippling new levies.
